Initiated in 1987, the Notill Program came about in response to pasture and hayfield losses farmers suffered after consecutive years of record droughts. Nearly 90% of North Georgia's fescue pastures were destroyed, and in need of replanting. Steep slopes coupled with highly erodible soils deemed the conventional plow-plant method unsuitable. The notill planting method remedies the problem by placing seed directly into the ground in one pass without prior preparation. This method saves fuel and reduces topsoil loss to wind and water erosion.
